

““This is a compelling story about what is possible when leaders are broken open from inside out to discover the mystery of God’s transforming power in the world through relationships with others. Over four decades of pastoral ministry, Terry Moe has been integrating spirituality and the practices of community organizing to engage congregation and community with a view to discerning the creative and redeeming activity of the Spirit. There is a good deal of practical wisdom here for how to do transformational ministry in this time between what the church and the world have been and the new reality that is trying to emerge.”

—Ray Pickett, rector, Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary, Berkeley, CA
